We can help negotiate employment agreements for a wide variety of medical professionals including physicians, dentists, pharmacists, physician assistants, physical therapists, nurses and other professionals. Let's review. Attorney Peter Talosig can review your employment contract, identify areas that can be improved and assist you in negotiating the best possible contract. There are many important contract terms which can present complex and diverse issues:

- Vague compensation clauses
- Small production bonuses
- Lack of benefits
- Not enough paid time off or vacation
- Unfavorable call schedules
- Inadequate insurance coverage
- Unfair non-compete/non-solicit clauses
- Biased termination provisions
- Uncertain partnership track
- Verbal guarantees or assurances

Let's face it. Reading and understanding your employment contract is not always as easy as it seems. Contracts are often filled with legal jargon and terms that require a decoder ring. They are often one-sided and can have significant consequences to you for years to come. Some provisions can negatively affect your future job possibilities. Do not commit to a verbal offer or a densely worded legal document that you may not completely understand and regret later. Many times you may not feel comfortable asking for better compensation, a flexible work schedule, or a more limited non-competition clause, and can benefit from an experienced attorney advocating for you.
